LOBNICA – WHEN A STREAM CHANGES INTO A WATERFALL...

Because of the impermeable aggregate ground, water runs off Pohorje over the surface creating the most abundant network of surface water in Slovenia. Springs and streams gradually unite in ever-greater riverbeds and flow quickly towards the valley over sheer ditches. The largest among them, Lobnica, Bistrica, Dravinja and Mislinja, are already proper rivers.

The source of the Lobnica stream can be found in the marshy eastern Pohorje plateau, near the lake Tiho jezero (Falski ribnik) below Bajgot vrh. Follow the stream through Pohorje's primeval forest downhill towards the river Drava. Characteristic of its stream are the numerous noises it makes, especially when the water increases and the stream turns into a waterfall. One such waterfall is Veliki Šumik, which is approximately 25m high and the most majestic waterfall in the region of Pohorje. A little further on from Veliki Šumik is another waterfall called Mali Šumik, which is 9 m high.
